The English translation, in pamphlet form, of Finance Minister Limantour's Currency Bill, is now for sale at the Herald office at $2 per copy.

This translation was made by L. C. Simonds with special care, in view of the momentous importance of the subject.

No doubt can exist that the plan of currency reform contained in this bill will be an accomplished fact before long.

It is, therefore, superfluous to emphasize the interest and importance of this bill and the lucid exposition which precedes it.

Every English-speaking person having interests of any kind in this republic will need to acquaint himself with the contents of this pamphlet.

From a Little Girl's Viewpoint.

The little daughter of a Washington newspaper correspondent could not understands her papa's activity and excitement over the election and asked what it was all about. "Well," he explained, "the people of this country are going to see if Mr. Roosevelt shall be kept in the White House or whether another man shall go there to take his place. Don't you remember that I took you up there to a party where there were lots of children, and Mrs. Roosevelt told you that if he was elected he would give another party next year and that you would be invited to come to it? I hope he will be elected so that he can stay there longer, and you can go to the party next year, don't you?" "Well," replied the little girl, "I don't see why they make so much fuss about it. Maybe the other man would give a party, too."—Boston Transcript.
