"If you want the news, read the ANGLO-AMERICAN"—quoted by J. Mastella Clarke in the Two Republics June 25th.

AS USUAL SLIGHTLY BEFUDGLED.

The following is extracted from the El Paso Bulletin. It shows, as usual, the boy editor of our esteemed contemporary, has again been changing the geography of the world with one stroke of the pen. Read this:

"Count F. M. de Prez yesterday closed a contract for the construction of a high print factory in Nogales, N. M., which will cost $3,800,000. Six hundred houses will be built for the accommodation of the employees of the factory.—The Two Republics, City of Mexico.

"Where is Nogales, N. M.? Should it not read Nogales, Arizona?" Our somewhat mixed colleague should have said Nogales, Vera-Cruz, but evidently not knowing located Nogales up in New Mexico, never expecting that its change by the sweep of a pen several hundred miles would ever be found out. VALE.

THE CEMETERY.

To-morrow night at 8.30 the meeting announced for the consideration of the cemetery question will take place.

The present cemetery is owned by the United States government and the object in calling the meeting is to call the attention of the Washington government to the necessity of buying a new site, and to prepare a memorial asking the government to make the necessary appropriation.

We understand that Col. Breckenridge, the government inspector of cemeteries, has expressed himself as being in sympathy with our people in this movement. The DAILY ANGLO-AMERICAN hopes that a full attendance will be on hand, as the subject is one of great importance to the American colony.

El Teponastle.

I could tell you lots of funny things in connection with these Indians, said the secretary of the Juzgado de Paz, as we sat over our second glass of tequila. Mysterious things! Things a man can't understand. For instance, I suppose you never happened to see a teponastle? Never even knew there was such a thing said I. Ah! Well now I'm going to tell you. A teponastle is a cylinder of wood about three feet in length and perhaps ten inches in diameter. It is polished on the outside and hollow on the inside, but how it is hollowed out, God and the Indians who make it only know. For there is no seam or join on ends or side to show how it was hollowed out.

It has three keys, like piano keys, one above the other, cut longitudinally, out of the cylinder itself. It is played upon with an ear of corn and can be played upon in no other way. A piece of wood, a drumstick made of rags, anything you like to think of, doesn't produce the same effect. And the effect is this; that the further off you go from the instrument while it is being played, the louder, and clearer it sounds. If it is being played in a house, you hear it better by going out into the street; better still by going about five blocks off; and best of all by going to the top of some cerro, a mile or two distant.

"First time I ever heard a teponastle, was in Coatepec, near Jalapa. Several of us including the Jefe politico, were talking of the mysterious instrument. The jefe said that the only man he knew of who could get us a sight of one was the cura. We went to see his reverence, and sure enough, after some persuasion, he fished one out of the church choir, where the Indians kept it. It was on that occasion, that I had an opportunity of testing the truth of what I had before heard and have just now told you regarding the peculiar acoustic properties of the teponastle.

Next time you go to Jalapa, you ask Don Luis Figueroa the jefe politico of Coatepec get you a sight of a teponastle. I'll undertake to show you one, though they are getting scarce now.

Ever in the National Museum in Mexico? I blush to state secretary, said I that I never was. Well, said he, there is a snake there, of stone, made I think by the Misteca Indians. It is about three feet long and wavy in shape, like this. And he traced a wavy line on the bench we were sitting on. That snake, sir, is hollow throughout its entire length, and how the devil the Indians who made it ever hollowed it out is as much a mystery to me as is the way they hollow out their teponastles.

Take another tequila? Well, secretary said I, seeing its you I believe I will. And we did.

NOBILITY IN A BAR-ROOM.

A Count Makes Most Excellent Mixed Drinks.

There is a well French barroom near the Anglo-American office that boasts of an Italian nobleman an accomplished Italian man of letters as being its principal barkeeper. A gentleman who has Italian born and lived in that country until he came to the years of maturity happened in this bar-room one day. He was astounded to be waited upon by a man who had of his schoolmates in Italy and whom he had afterward known as for many years a professor of Latin in one of the Italian universities. It was the old story with this man, as he explained to his whilom schoolmate. He had given up his professorship and come to this country in the hopes of bettering his fortunes, only to be disappointed, and finally to be driven to barkeeping as the only employment open to him. This scion of a noble family had come to this country after having run through in gaudy what little patrimony had come to him and after knocking about from one thing to another had come down to his present state.

A very enjoyable at home was given on Saturday evening at the residence of Mrs. Gleison, Calle Magnolia, it being the Saints Day of her daughter Miss Mary. Miss Mary and her sister Martha sang most charmingly for the guests. Mr. Thos. S. Gore also sang. Several of the Anglo-American Colony, Mr. S. Day, Mrs. Spalding, the Misses Wilson, Mr. W. Hughes and Mr. Potts and many others were present, and the dancing was delightful.

SUNDAY SERMONS.

What the Preachers Preached yesterday.

TRINITY M. E. CHURCH. Rev. Dr. J. W. Butler took for his text "That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. Eph. 2; 7." The reverend gentleman said; I. The ages past are implied. Some always refer to the "Glory of the Past." Let us look at the following for a moment, "Roman Bravery," "Spartan Integrity" and the Fathers of the Republic. But it is the good of those days that has come down to us. All false religions look to the past.

Hinduism, Buddhism and Moham edanism look back for their golden age. They mourn their decadence. Judaism, looks back for its glory. It was but the "shadow of good things to come" and not the substance. Even Romanism has to look back at the glory which has departed from it in these great Catholic Countries.

II. The defect and want of past ages was felt and hope of better things here after expressed. Illustrations were here given from Socrates, Alcibiades, Virgil and others. Man's natural tendency is downward but pure Cristianity lifts man up and inspires him to look forward for brighter and better days.

III. The golden age. "Ages to come" Explanations of this term were taken from Isaiah. The preacher also gave the following meanings which it implied. a) It comes by divine appointment and mercy. b) It develops riches of light also riches of grace. c) It bespeaks for us, regeneration, also Heavenly Elevation and nearness and union of divine friendship.

IV. The minister then dwelt on the two points, the origin and cause of this beneficence and that the source of all this was to come through Jesus Christ. Illustrations were here given as proofs in the history of individuals and nations. This golden age is dawning.

Yes, in spite of infidelity indifference and the wickedness in high places about us, the world is growing better. Are you in sympathy with the work! How sublime an undertaking! This Gospel lifts a fallen world toward God, and is the only thing which can save you in time and eternity or make you better and fit to dwell with God forever. Cycles of eternity, coming ages, will ever reveal new riches of Gods kindness to redeemed souls.

UNION EVANGELICAL CHURCH. Rev. Hubert W. Brown, who preached yesterday morning, chose for his text Proverbs 23:7, "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." It is not what a man appears to be in his outward life, but what he is in his beliefs that determines his character. The main purpose of the preacher was to establish this point. He quoted an utterance of President Patton, of Princeton. "It is not true that Christianity is a life and not a doctrine." Every age has its characteristic tendencies. It is not always best to drift with the current. In religious history there are periods characterized by strong faith in the doctrines of Christianity. Christians have died at the stake rather than deny the faith. Mexico also has had her martyrs. It was faith such as this which made the Reformation period at once heroic and glorious. In our day men see more clearly that liberty of conscience is the individual's inalienable right, and toleration is universally advocated. Our danger is to rush to the other extreme and say that the life is everything and the doctrines of little or no importance. It is again this peril the speaker sounded a note of warning.

Refinement is always in danger of degenerating into over-refinement. Beware of an emancipated Christianity. Diletantism is a sign of incipient decay. Civilization brought luxury and luxury led to decay. Leisure for study has always led many into doubt. In times of indifference as to the doctrines, the spiritual life of Christendom has been at a low ebb. We must avoid this danger. It is also true that it is impossible to divorce life from belief. One says if I only believe, my conduct makes little difference; another if I only do what is right my lack of faith is of small moment. Both are wrong. You have more confidence in a merchant who really believes honesty to be the best policy than in one who does not. The belief that knowledge is power will make a man studious; that ignorance is bliss, will keep him blissfully ignorant. Only be sure that your beliefs in reference to sin and salvation, God the Father and Christ the Son, and the Bible as a divine revelation will tend powerfully to shape your conduct. Obedience and no love and faith would not please God. Christianity is a noble life based on glorious doctrines or beliefs. As a man thinketh in his heart so is he. Let Christ's prayer be realized in you all: "Sanctify them by thy truth, thy word is truth."

Y. M. C. A. In spite of the pelting rain last night quite a number attended the Song Service at the Young Mens' Christian Association Hall. Rev. H. W. Brown made a few remarks, Miss Snow and Mrs. Blake sang one of Moody and Sankey's popular songs. Miss Snow and Mr. Gore sang "Refuge," the audience joining in the refrain. Mrs. E. C. Butler and Mr. Day played an exquisite selection on piano and violin: Clark's "Prayer." Mr.

A. Palmer Coombe appeared for the first time last night. He sang "The Palms." Mr. Coombe has a rich bass voice with fine middle and lower notes. He greatly delighted the audience. The audience also took part in the service with some fine congregational hymns.

The Palmarejo Muddle.

The advisory committee appointed in London to confer on the present position with the board of directors of the Palmarejo Mining Company, limited, and the Mexican Mineral Railway Company, Limited, of Sonora report as follows:—

(1) We have examined the documents asked for and submitted to us, also the latest cables from Palmarejo, together with the estimates referred to by the chairman at the meeting held on the 27th instant, and have much pleasure in confirming the chairman's statement, viz.—That the amount of £50,000 will be ample to place the mill, railway, conduit, and other works in a thoroughly efficient condition to produce dividends.

(2) The delay in completion arises mainly from the railway, and this is practically finished and in running order for two-thirds of the total length, and as to the remaining one-third, some sections are in an advanced state, and the remainder are well in hand.

(3) We have pleasure in stating that we consider the board have acted in good faith, and should be exonerated from all blame.

(4) We recommend strongly the adoption of the proposal for the issue of debentures attached here to, whereby the company will be saved and placed upon a secure and solid foundation, thus also offering a sound investment to the present shareholders.

(5) We very strongly urge on the shareholders to subscribe for a proportion of their holdings, as the necessity is urgent to raise this money, and at once.

(6) We desire to call attention to the apportioning of the £50,000 now asked for. The Palmarejo Mining Company will require about £16,000, and the amount required by the Mexican Mineral Railway Company will be advanced by the Palmarejo Mining Company to the Mexican Railway Company on equitable terms to both companies, taking into consideration the terms upon which the Palmarejo Mining Company now issues the £50,000 debentures. Any surplus on completion of works will be set aside for the redemption of these debentures.

"At the request of the board the advisory committee will, should it be the desire of shareholders in general meeting, continue to act in conjunction with the board until the railway is finished, and regular crushings take place. The chairman of Palmarejo Mining Company and the Mexican Mineral Railway Company has consented to leave for Palmarejo during the autumn, and the committee are certain that his visit to the property, and his supervision while there, will be matter of great satisfaction to every shareholder."

The £50,000 of debentures are to carry interest at 12 per cent., payable half yearly, a commission of three fully-paid shares of £1 each in the Palmarejo Company for every £10 of debentures to be issued to any person taking debentures.

Our London Letter. LONDON, July 30, 1891. The departure of the German Emperor has been followed by the arrival of the Prince of Naples the heir to the throne of Italy. The prince appears to be a mild looking and mild spoken young man who has been in a quiet way paraded about and shown a good deal of England and English life without creating any special sensation. Our next sensation is expected to be a visit from the French Fleet. The recent French Naval operations are said to have been very successful and show a very high state of discipline in the French Navy. It remains to be seen how far they will support their reputation in competition with our own sailors.

The Italian Opera closed on Monday last with one of the finest performances of Lohengrin that has ever been heard on any stage, the principal artists being recalled over and over again before the curtain; probably no better representation of the hero has ever been seen on any stage than the Australian Singer Madame Melba and the brothers Reszke cannot be surpassed in their parts.

The Banquet given by the Lord Mayor of London to the Ministry afforded Lord Salisbury the opportunity of dispelling the rumors that had been current as to the possibility of some intervention by the Government for the purpose of settling the financial question in the Argentine States. Lord Salisbury plainly stated that their concerns were matters of purely domestic arrangement to be carried out by the States themselves and afforded no hope that the Government would make any proposition or take any steps with a view of restoring either social or financial order.

In consequence of this statement the money market has been greatly depressed and some rumours are flying about with reference to the position of the various financial houses who have relations with South America and it is stated on good authority that London Bankers absolutely refuse to make any advances whatever on Argentine Scrip.
