

A MIDSUMMER ATHLETE.

The girl who goes in strehuously for athletics, especially the one who aims to win prizes during tennis tournament week, takes care to provide herself with a roomy shirtwaist of the sort which will absorb moisture. Trig little blouses somewhat of the Peter Pan order are developed of mohair or rough silk. They are tailor finished and have soft turnover collar and cuffs. Usually these blouses are in shades to correspond with one or the other of the colors in the striped mohair or serge outing skirt.
